Business Quotes vs What They Really Mean

“We only run promos occasionally” – No cadence, no commitment

“We'll serve anywhere” – No defined service area

“Our market is really niche” – Reachable market is too small/too vague

“We don't know how to test offers” – Haven't or tighten ICP/persona definitions

Best Fit = $ Efficient

Who are you trying to reach?

Start broad: Target markets define your addressable audience and measure penetration over time.

What characteristics matter?

Break your market into segments, as different segments may require different timing or messaging to be most effective.

Who's your best fit?

Note best fit customers—Ideally & Historically. Ideal Customer Profiles (ICP) focus you on those who'll get the most value from your offering ...and stick around.

How do you speak to them?

Shape messaging round Personas; they are the decision-makers within your ICPs. This matters because Personas ensure your outreach feels personal, not generic.

Where will you target?

Plot targets on a map and engage prospects in proximity, because neighbors talk, industry clusters ease productivity friction, so saturation compounds awareness.

We help you turn outreach into a measurable, repeatable growth system by defining who to target and mapping where to reach them, then launching campaigns tied to both and tracking coverage so you always know what you've accomplished and what's next.

How do I measure success?

Coverage tracking turns random outreach into systematic market capture. Don't lose track of territory you've covered and your saturated level.
